LDST 306: Leadership in Cultural and Historical Contexts

FALL 2014

COURSE TIME AND LOCATION: Mon, Wed 3:00-4:15, Jepson 101
CLASS WEBSITE: https://blackboard.richmond.edu

INSTRUCTOR: Dr. Chris von Rueden
EMAIL: cvonrued@richmond.edu
OFFICE: Jepson 235
OFFICE HOURS: Tues 10:00-12:00 & by appointment

Course Description:
In this course, we will study the ecological and cultural factors that shape political organization. Through cases studies drawn from primatology, cultural anthropology, and political history, students will learn about what makes human leadership unique and investigate why leadership and political organization vary across human societies, both historically and cross-culturally. Some of the questions we consider include: Why do humans adopt leader and follower roles at all? What is the nature of leadership in other social animals, particularly chimpanzees? Are there any human societies that lack leadership? Are there societies in which, on average, women wield more power than men? Why are some human societies more hierarchical than others? The goal of the course is not only to expose students to the ecological, cultural, and historical contexts that shape leadership but also to stimulate them to think critically about human social behavior in general.

Readings:
The readings for this course consist of a mix of empirical social science articles and more popular journal articles or opinion pieces (see Reading List below). All of the readings will be available through BlackBoard. In addition, three books are assigned for this course and are available for purchase at the UR bookstore:

How you will be graded:

1. Discussion (15% of grade)

   The format of the class is a mixture of lecture and open discussion about the readings. You must come prepared to class with questions and comments, having carefully read what is assigned for that class (see Reading List below). In addition, two students will be assigned as experts for each reading; one student will summarize the main points of the reading for the class (~3 minutes) and then the other student will critique the reading and connect it to the broader themes of the course (~3 minutes). This does not mean that only these students discuss the readings. Students should not be timid and all are expected to contribute to each class discussion. Attendance and lateness are also factored into your discussion grade. I ask that you not leave during class-time unless you are in physical discomfort.

2. Reaction Papers (15% of grade)

   You need to write a reaction to a minimum of 15 readings (whether articles or book chapters), throughout the semester. These should be critical evaluations AS WELL AS summaries of the main points of the readings. You will only receive partial credit if you simply summarize or if it appears you didn’t read the entire article. Reaction papers should be turned in at the start of the class during which we are scheduled to discuss the particular reading. The reaction paper should only be a page long, at most two pages (typed, double spaced, 12-point font, 1 inch margins). You must include your name and the title of the reading and use staples if you are turning in more than one page. It is up to you to decide for which of the readings you will turn in reaction papers.

3. Midterm Exam (20% of grade)

   The midterm exam will consist of multiple choice and short answer questions having you compare and contrast positions taken by authors we’ve read and material presented in lecture.

4. Final Paper (20% of grade)

   Throughout the course you will work in groups of 3 to research the political organization of a particular human society (details to be provided in class). In the final paper, which you write jointly with your group members, you present the results of your research. You must develop a clear, theoretically-motivated argument for the paper, in consultation with me. The paper should include a minimum of 10 pages of text (double spaced, 12-point font) and structured into four sections: (1) Introduction, in which you present your argument; (2) Body, in which you defend your argument with literature from class and from your own research (3) Conclusion, in which you restate your argument and situate it within the broader context of the course; (4) References, in which you list your cited articles.
Wikipedia and non-scholarly websites are not valid bibliographic sources for papers written in this class. In addition to the paper, your group will deliver a presentation to the class on your research during the final two class periods.

5. Final Exam (30% of grade)

The final exam will consist of multiple choice and short answer questions having you compare and contrast positions taken by authors we’ve read and material presented in lecture. The final exam is cumulative but may emphasize the latter half of the course.

Notes:

1. To be successful in this course, a student should expect to devote 10-14 hours each week, including class time and time spent on course-related activities.

7. Cell phones and laptops may not be used during class. Use of a cell phone or laptop during class will mean I count you as absent that day.

8. If you ever have questions outside of class, I encourage you to drop by my office. Outside of office hours, it is best to set up an appointment via email to ensure I am in my office when you come by. I’m eager to help students but you must take the initiative to meet with me. Also, I won’t answer big questions by email.

Campus Resources:

Academic Skills Center (http://asc.richmond.edu, 289-8626 or 289-8956): Supports students in assessing their academic strengths and weaknesses; honing their academic skills through teaching effective test preparation, critical reading and thinking, information processing, concentration, and related techniques; working on specific subject areas (e.g. calculus, chemistry, accounting, etc.); and encouraging campus and community involvement.

Career Services (http://careerservices.richmond.edu/ or 289-8547): Assists students in exploring their interests and abilities, choosing a major, connecting with internships and learning experiences, investigating graduate and professional school options, and landing a first job. We encourage students to schedule an appointment with a career advisor during their first year.

Counseling and Psychological Services (http://caps.richmond.edu or 289-8119): Assists students in meeting academic, personal, or emotional challenges. Services include assessment, short-term counseling and psychotherapy, crisis intervention, psychiatric consultation, and related services.

Speech Center (http://speech.richmond.edu or 289-6409): Assists with preparation and practice in the pursuit of excellence in public expression. Recording, playback, coaching and critique sessions offered by teams of student consultants trained to assist in developing ideas, arranging key points for more effective organization, improving style and delivery, and handling multimedia aids for individual and group presentations.

Writing Center (http://writing.richmond.edu or 289-8263): Assists writers at all levels of experience, across all majors. Students can schedule appointments with trained peer writing consultants who offer friendly critiques of written work.

Boatwright Library Research Librarians (http://library.richmond.edu/help/ask.html or 289-8876): Assist students with identifying and locating the best resources for class assignments, research papers and other course projects. Librarians also assist students with questions about citing sources correctly. Students can email, text, or IM a librarian, or schedule a personal research appointment to meet with a librarian in the first floor Research and Collaborative Study area.
