Course Description

This course introduces students to the study of leadership from a social scientific perspective. Using readings from across the social sciences (psychology, sociology, political science, and others), we will examine topics that are central to leadership. For example, we will discuss what individual and contextual characteristics make people more or less likely to emerge as leaders. We will also consider issues of power, politics, social justice, and cross-cultural differences through the lens of leadership. Throughout the course, we will place a special emphasis on empirical studies of leadership. In the process, we will learn to think as social scientists.

You will need your laptop for certain in-class activities. Please bring your laptop to every class.

Required Texts

Steele, C. M. (2010). Whistling Vivaldi: How Stereotypes Affect Us and What We Can Do. New York, NY: WW Norton & Company.

All other materials will be provided via Blackboard or Boatwright library's website.

Course Grades

Your grade will be based on your performance across a range of assignments. You will complete a midterm and a final (2 X 22 = 44 points), a contemporary issues essay (10 points), seven responses to assigned readings (2 X 7 = 14 points), a group presentation and book discussion (12 points), and engage in active class participation, assessed within a week after the midterm and at the end of class (10 + 10 = 20 points). Points for each assignment translate directly and with equal weight into the percentages towards the final grade.

Passing Letter Grades are Assigned as Follows

A+ = 98-100%	B+ = 88-89%	C+ = 78-79%	D+ = 68-69%
A = 94-97%	B = 84-87%	C = 74-77%	D = 64-67%	F <60
A- = 90-93%	B- = 80-83%	C- = 70-73%	D- = 60-63%

Assignments and Class Activities

Midterm and Final (2 X 22 = 44 points). You will take two exams during the semester: a midterm and a final. Both exams will be open-note. This means that you can bring hand-written notes to the exam. No electronic notes will be allowed during either exam. Exam prompts will be open-ended and are designed to assess your understanding and ability to integrate class material (as opposed to your memorization abilities). The midterm will focus on the material covered up to the midterm date and the final exam will be comprehensive.

Contemporary Issues Essay (10 points). Many topics and concepts discussed during the course will appear in the news and other media. This essay is an opportunity for you to use class material to understand the broader world. During the semester, you will write an essay (about 4-pages long not counting references, with 1" margins, double-spaced, in Times New Roman 12-point font) connecting course concepts to (your choice of) real-life issues and events. Please note that I will grade your essay based on the quality of contribution, not its length. Given this, if you think that you need more or less space, you can write a shorter or a longer essay. As long as the discussed issue or event is current (i.e. occurred during the semester), you can write about it. A rubric for this essay is provided via Blackboard. The due date for the essay is November 21st, at 11:59 pm. I will reduce your grade by 1 point for each day the assignment is late.

Responses to Assigned Readings (2 X 7 = 14 points). For the majority of weeks, students will have one or two readings assigned for each class (videos do not count as readings for this class). To facilitate in-class discussion, each student will write 7 short reading responses to the readings during the course. From September 6th to November 17th, we will cover 7 topic areas (for example, Individual Characteristics of Leaders, Leadership and Politics, etc.). You are expected to write one response for each topic area. You will choose a reading / readings to which you would like to respond in each topic area. Responses should be between 1 and 2 pages long, with 1" margins, double-spaced, in Times New Roman size 12 font. Student responses must address the following points:

- What is the author's primary argument?
- How does this argument connect to other class material and / or what are potential criticisms of the author's argument?
- What two questions do you have after reading the assigned text? (Questions can be directly about the material covered in the reading or about how this material connects to other topics and issues discussed in class.)

If your response covers these points in a way that makes it clear that you read and thought about course material, you will get 2 points. If the response partially demonstrates this, you will get 1 point. If the response does not demonstrate this, you will get 0 points. These responses will not be graded for grammar, spelling, or punctuation and can be written in the form of a note. Please submit your response as a pdf using a Dropbox submission folder link that is available on Blackboard. I will not take late responses; however, if you have missed one of the responses, you can make it up by writing a response for the November 22nd reading. You can only write this additional response if you have not submitted one of the responses during the semester and not instead of the response that you have submitted and missed points on.

Group Presentation (12 points). You will prepare a group presentation based on Whistling Vivaldi: How Stereotypes Affect Us and What We Can Do. I will assign groups randomly. You will work on the presentation as a group during the November 29th class. You must read the book before the November 29th class. During the November 29th class, I will provide prompts that your presentation should cover. I will join each group during class to facilitate in-group discussion of the book material. You should submit your presentation via Blackboard (as a Google Doc link, PDF, or a PowerPoint) by 5:00 pm on November 30th. One person can submit on behalf of the group. On December 1st, we will use your presentations during a general book discussion. 12 points for group presentation will include both the assessment of group presentation and your individual participation in the discussion of the book. As such, if you have not participated sufficiently in the book discussion, your grade for this assignment will be lower than that of your groupmates.

Class Participation (assessed twice during the semester, 2 X 10 = 20 points). Each student should come to class having carefully read the assigned materials. Students should be prepared to engage with the instructor and each other in a respectful manner appropriate for a professional setting. You are expected to come to every class, and your participation grade will suffer if you do not. With that said, I will grant excused absences with ease if you reach out before class and explain the nature of your absence. I will grade participation twice, once within a week after the midterm and once at the end of the course. The first grade will assess your participation before the midterm, and the second grade will assess your participation after the midterm.

Additional Assignment and Grading Policies:

If a student disagrees with their grade for any of the assignments, they must discuss it with me within a week after the grade is returned. The two exceptions to this are the final and the final participation grade, for which students must contact me within 2 days after grades are posted.

Addressing Microaggressions on Campus

Microaggressions are the everyday verbal, nonverbal, and environmental slights, snubs, or insults, whether intentional or unintentional, that communicate hostile, derogatory, or negative messages to target persons based solely upon their marginalized group membership¹. Recent research has found that, when professors do not address microaggressions in class, microaggressions foster alienation of marginalized groups². Furthermore, both students and faculty who are exposed to microaggressions more often are more likely to have depressive symptoms and negative affect (a negative view of the world)³. A comfortable and productive environment where meaningful learning happens can be collectively created through actions, words, or environmental cues that promote the inclusion and success of marginalized members, recognizing their embodied identity, validating their realities, resisting sexism, ableism, and racism⁴. With this in mind, community member at the University of Richmond should aim to address microaggressions in the classroom by holding themselves, other students, and faculty accountable for what is said and being receptive to criticism when perpetuating these slights, snubs, or insults.
