Leadership Ethics
LDST 450, Section 5

Fall 2023

Course Syllabus

Instructor: Terry L. Price
E-mail: tprice@richmond.edu
Meeting Requests: Please contact me via email to set up a meeting.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

In this course, we will analyze and construct arguments about what leadership behaviors are morally right, what ends of leadership are morally good, and what aspects of a leader’s character are morally virtuous. In this respect, the course is similar to other courses in ethics—in that it too seeks to answer the basic question: what matters morally? However, this question takes on a particular guise in leadership contexts. Do the same things matter morally in leadership, and do they matter in the same way or to the same extent? So, this course is different from other courses in ethics in that it uses philosophy to investigate the moral distinctiveness of leadership. Our main goal will be to identify and understand the peculiar moral challenges faced by leaders, as well as potential responses and solutions.

We begin the course by framing traditional ethical questions in leadership contexts. Some examples are the following: Are leaders special? Do they have their own morality? What motivates them to lead? Does anything count morally aside from a leader’s self-interest—a leader’s wants, plans, and projects? Is it possible for leaders to act against self-interest if morality asks that they do so? Is character the focus of the ethical analysis of leaders, or should we look instead to particular actions? If ethics is concerned primarily with the actions of leaders, should our assessments of their behavior consider the intentions behind the actions—what was willed—or the consequences in which leaders’ actions result? What should be the basis of a leader’s motivation? Do consequences other than well-being and happiness matter morally?

As we work through these questions, we will pay special attention to the moral psychology of leadership. Moral psychology is a subfield of ethics dedicated to the study of the relationships among belief, motivation, and action. Throughout the course, we will use my book Leadership Ethics: An Introduction to consider a central component of the moral psychology of leadership: a belief about justification—namely, that leaders are sometimes justified in doing what others are not allowed to do. If leaders have a convincing reason or set of reasons to behave in ways that are proscribed for the rest of us, then ethical leadership may be consistent with breaking the moral rules. We must therefore ask whether leaders are distinctive in terms of their ability to meet demands for justification.
Rule breaking is a central theme—perhaps the central theme—in the course. What are the rules and who gets to break them? But there are many other, often related, themes at the core of discussions in leadership ethics. These topics also raise questions about the moral distinctiveness of leadership. We will take up relativism, egoism, self-defense and defense of others, authenticity, moral saintliness, moral luck, dirty hands, the role of feelings, and role responsibilities. All are topics worthy of examination on their own merits, but our work on them will allow us to assess the strengths and weaknesses of the main theories of moral leadership covered in the course.

In the concluding sessions of the course, we will turn to issues that fall under what we might call ethics broadly construed—what is a good, moral life as a leader and/or follower? In particular, we will take up the notions of conscience, charismatic motivation, and a meaningful professional life.

All of my courses are designed for rigorous discussion of the issues, which means that students bear an equal burden in explaining, critiquing, and developing the ideas conveyed in the readings. To facilitate this kind of engagement, I use assigned seating. I regularly call on people and ask them to answer specific questions about the readings so they can demonstrate Preparation and Engagement. For each class, you should be prepared to answer the following questions and point to passages in the text to support your answers:

1. What is the author’s main conclusion? (Example of evidence: the author’s thesis statement.) How did the author get there? (Evidence: examples, assumptions, arguments.)
2. Given the central questions of the course, what is the author’s most important, provocative, or controversial claim? (Example: “Unlike Kant, she argues that lying is permissible in some circumstances.” Evidence: the passage where she makes this claim.)
3. What part of the author’s argument is most susceptible to critique? Can the argument be saved?

Each student is also required to write at least one Short Paper. Short papers are 800-1000 words, and they engage critically with readings identified as “short paper opportunities.” Because these papers are supposed to convey your understanding and analysis of the readings, outside sources are prohibited and will be considered unauthorized assistance in the completion of the assignment. I will often use these papers to structure class and ask that they be read aloud, so they are due to me via email the day before class—with a grace period until 9 a.m. on Wednesday. I strongly recommend that you write more than one short paper. Your Solution Paper must be based on work from your short papers. Also, each additional short paper that you write (up to four total short papers) adds one point to the grade of your strongest short paper. You may choose once to write on a reading from the class just previous. Assuming you haven’t already taken advantage of this option, you can use it to get credit for a paper submitted after 9 a.m. on Wednesday. Otherwise, please do not ask me to accept a late paper.

There will be two Readings Tests. These tests serve several functions. They give you extra incentive to read carefully and to retain what you’ve read. They also give me a sense of your understanding of the course basics. Careful reading, retention, and understanding are necessary for achieving the main goals of the course: engaging with the material at a sophisticated level in class discussions—including in response to presentations of other students—and in your final papers. The tests are therefore means to an end, not ends in themselves.

_Attendance_ affects your _Preparation and Engagement_ grade, your _Short Papers_ grade (in-person attendance for the entire class is required for your paper to count), and—in all likelihood—your _Readings Tests_ grades. Please email me if you are unable to attend class.

Please note that _we begin and end on time_ and that students are expected to remain in class for the entire class period. We will take a break!

ELECTRONIC DEVICES

Computers, tablets, and phones are not permitted in class. Recording class sessions or meetings is also prohibited. All devices must be silenced and placed out of view during class. Students should minimize any other distractions and respect the rules of standard classroom etiquette.

THE HONOR CODE AND USE OF AI

As a student at the University of Richmond, you are bound by the Honor Code. The Honor Code prohibits the use of any unauthorized assistance. For this course, the use of text-generating artificial intelligence tools (such as, but not limited to, ChatGPT) will be considered unauthorized assistance. I will work with Honor Council to investigate and address any potential violations. This includes the use of generative AI for any stage of the work from conception to completion.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

- The student should understand the relationship between leadership and rule breaking.
- The student should be able to catalog the strengths and weaknesses of competing theories of moral leadership.
- Drawing on philosophical ethics, the student should become a keen moral observer of leadership and, in particular, the moral psychology of leadership.
- The student should learn how to critique moral arguments and how to present original moral arguments.
- The student should be able to recognize and respond to peculiar challenges to our moral assessments of leadership: relativism, moral luck, and dirty hands cases.
- The student should be able to provide an ethically informed reading of leadership theory.

REQUIRED TEXTS

Blackboard Readings.

REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING¹

Your final grade will be determined as follows:

1. Preparation and Engagement  20%
2. Short Papers  25%
3. Readings Test 1  10%
4. Readings Test 2  15%
5. Solution Paper  30%

I take deadlines and scheduled exams seriously. In fairness to your classmates, any emergencies that arise should be brought to my attention as soon as possible before scheduled tests or the final paper. Otherwise, I do not accept late work. I will accept and grade unfinished work. There are no extensions for short papers, and they must meet the 800-word minimum to count. I do not give “extra credit.”

I will round final grades. For example, 92.5 is sufficient for an A in this course.

Grading legend:

- A+  97-100
- A  93-96
- A-  90-92
- B+  87-89
- B  83-86
- B-  80-82
- C+  77-79
- C  73-76
- C-  70-72
- D+  67-69
- D  63-66
- D-  60-62
- F  50-59

¹ I reserve the right the refuse to accept any work submitted without the honor pledge.
HOW TO DO WELL IN THIS COURSE

Pretty much failsafe in my experience!

1. Attend all classes. Worry less about notetaking than about staying engaged in the discussion. I will provide necessary notes.

2. Carefully complete all readings in advance of class meetings. When reading, identify passages to which you can easily refer to answer the three sets of questions above. (Some material may require re-reading.)

3. Use the week to prepare for our one-day-per-week class. Do the after-class readings and spread your work out over shorter, focused blocks. Do not save this course for Tuesday night!

4. Write the maximum number of short papers (4).

5. Be an informed participant in discussions by drawing directly on the texts. (See 2 above.)

6. Write a final paper that builds on your best short paper and responds to my comments, as well as—if applicable—the comments of your classmates.

SCHEDULE (subject to change as the semester progresses)

* Short Paper Opportunity

I. The distinctive challenge of leadership ethics

Wednesday, August 30

Before Class:
Hollander, “Conformity, Status, and Idiosyncrasy Credit,” 120-121
Hollander, “Competence and Conformity in the Acceptance of Influence”
Price, “Leader Exceptionalism”

After Class:
Price, Leadership Ethics, 1-8

II. What is the nature of the rules, and why do people break them (and how should we react to people who do)?

Wednesday, September 6

Wolf, “Sanity and the Metaphysics of Responsibility”*
Moody-Adams, “Culture, Responsibility, andAffected Ignorance”*
Wednesday, September 13
Before Class:
Plato, Republic, 1-25, 37-40
Ludwig and Longenecker, “The Bathsheba Syndrome: The Ethical Failure of Successful Leaders”*
After Class:
Price, Leadership Ethics, 73-81

III. What are the moral rules? (Or is that even the right way to think about ethics?)

Wednesday, September 20
Before Class:
Kant, Groundwork of the Metaphysic of Morals, 61-73, 88-92
Korsgaard, “The Right to Lie: Kant on Dealing with Evil”*
Price, Leadership Ethics, 38-43

Wednesday, September 27
Before Class:
Kant, Groundwork of the Metaphysic of Morals, 95-113
Flanigan, “The Ethics of Authentic Leadership”*
Price, Leadership Ethics, 44-51

Thursday, September 28
Jason Riley Lecture, Queally Center, 5 p.m.

Wednesday, October 4
READINGS TEST 1
Before or After Class:
Mill, Utilitarianism, 185-202
Price, Leadership Ethics, 192-204

Wednesday, October 11
Before Class:
Singer, “Famine, Affluence, and Morality”*
Wolf, “Moral Saints”*

Wednesday, October 18
Before Class:
Annas, “Being Virtuous and Doing the Right Thing”*
After Class:
Price, “The Virtue of Leadership”
IV. When necessity and bad luck get in the way…

Wednesday, October 25
Before Class:
Machiavelli, The Prince, 54-72
Nagel, “Moral Luck”*
Williams, “Moral Luck”*
After Class:
Price, Leadership Ethics, 145-151

Wednesday, November 1
Before Class:
Walzer, “Political Action: The Dilemma of Dirty Hands”*
Thalos, “Dirty Hands: The Phenomenology of Acting As an Authorized Agent”*

V. What is moral motivation? (And what do we do now?)

Wednesday, November 8
Before Class:
Bennett, “The Conscience of Huckleberry Finn”*
Flanigan, “Charisma and Moral Reasoning”*

Wednesday, November 15
TBA

Wednesday, November 22
THANKSGIVING WEEK

Wednesday, November 29
READINGS TEST 2

Wednesday, December 6
Before Class:
Swaim, The Speechwriter: A Brief Education in Politics

Monday, December 18
FINAL PAPERS DUE VIA EMAIL (Friday, December 15, strongly preferred)